I Still Do: Loving and Living with Alzheimer's

Judith Fox

With poignant clarity, author Judith Fox provides a rare glimpse into living with the face of Alzheimer's in this pictorial tribute to her husband, Edmund. Edmund Fox was an accomplished man who once flew planes, performed surgeries, and worked crossword puzzles. Now he strives to hang on to the things he can do, while learning to let go of the things he can't. From denial to frustration to acceptance, this beautiful pictorial and poetical record embraces the reality of loving a spouse who is no longer able to remember, and it shares with us the man to whom Fox says I Still Do. Robin Phillips
